PRINCIPAL LIGHTING DESIGNER RETIRES

Chris Lewis, Principal Designer at Lighting Design International will retire on the 1st April 2021 having been a leading figure in the industry for 38 years. Working alongside Sally Storey, Founding Director, Chris has been instrumental in the growth and development of Lighting Design International and the success it is today. Chris's passion and interest in lighting started when he chose to design a light fixture at Ravensbourne College of Art and Design. He began experimenting with light and soon became fascinated with the play of light on surfaces. This was later augmented by a seminar on lighting design given by Janet Turner of Concord Lighting, who showed examples of how a space can be transformed by the use of light and how the right light can enhance forms, colours and materials within a space. Throughout his career Chris has worked on a wide variety of amazing projects and has inspired those around him with his commitment to projects and the quality of his work.
