

"LUCY" BY MAXIM WAKULTSCHIK

ART

3D Wall Art

3D wall art, also known as sculptural painting, is taking the limelight in the world of luxury interior décor. Artistically satisfying and intellectually stimulating, these textural pieces bring walls to life with contemporary refinement.

Maxim Wakultschik's mixed-media art is one of such artworks. "His figurative portraits have a dreamscape feel with colours that interact with ambient lighting and are seen to change as the viewer moves," says co-founder of HOFA Gallery Simonida Pavicevic.

PRODUCT

Apple Card

After bringing us innovations like iPhone, Apple TV and AirPods, Apple has returned with its reinvention of the credit card. According to the tech giant's website, its new Apple Card is "built on simplicity, transparency and privacy, and designed to help customers lead a healthier financial life."

Similar to Apple Pay, Apple Card is built into the Apple Wallet app on iPhone, but customers can get their hands on a lightweight titanium Apple Card to use where Apple Pay is not accepted. The card – as with other Apple products – is ultra sleek. It's a clean white with a laser-etched Apple logo, but without any card number, CVV code, expiration date or signature.

PRODUCT

PHOTO COURTESY OF SALON 94 DESIGN

Sculptural Furniture

Still on the topic of sculptural finesse, Thomas Barger designs oddly shaped camp-inspired furniture pieces like this chair. Titled "Ornament is a Shaker Crime", the paper pulp sculpture is a loud combination of blue and yellow and is a nod to his younger years growing up in a rural environment.

The New York-based artist unveiled the chair as part of a series of home objects in his solo exhibition "Sugar Dish". Through "Sugar Dish" he confronts his relationship participating in a commercial market and reflecting on what luxury used to mean to him.